

the numbers game

10 reasons why you need to take your clubs to Wales. You'll find lots more on the following pages

Location, location, location

Our golfing real estate is gold standard. Take your pick from a portfolio of luscious links, mature parkland, championship challenges or a quick nine holes. Great variety is part of what we call 'golf as it should be'. Find out what golfers think on pages 4–5.

If you're not playing in Wales, you're missing links

A classic links experience is the Holy Grail for any serious golfer. With Wales's 141,597 yards of great links stretching across 870 miles of rugged coastline, you'll be on a true golfing crusade. See pages 6–9 for some superb courses – links, parkland and a mix of both.

No need to wait for the 19th hole

Golf can be thirsty work. When playing spectacular Nefyn & District stop off at the historic Tŷ Coch Inn between the 15th and 16th holes for some well-deserved liquid refreshment. Don't get carried away, though. Your score may suffer if you drink and drive. On pages 10–13 Bryn Terfel reveals that Nefyn is one of his favourites, and compares opera with golf.

Size matters

Small country, big personality. We make it easy to combine a golfing break with some off-course activities. Buzzing nightlife, inspiring wildlife, pulse-pounding adventure sports and a myriad of attractions are all on the agenda. Keeping the family happy when Dad's playing golf: the secret's out on pages 14–19.

Natural selection

Bernard Darwin, godfather of sports writers and grandson of naturalist Charles, was a big fan of Welsh golf. Aberdovey was the place his 'soul loved best of all the courses in the world'. Lots of things have changed since Darwin's day, but the quality of our golf isn't one of them. We've selected 18 iconic holes from courses throughout Wales on pages 20–23.

We have a soft spot for this Scotsman

Legendary golfer and course designer James Braid left his mark on Wales. The North Wales James Braid Trail showcases 10 of his best Welsh works. For Braid's Welsh connections see pages 24–25.

At the end of the day...

The warm welcome in our clubhouses turns a good day out into a great one. We're an accommodating bunch and never pass up the chance to make new friends. A little Welsh hwyl goes a long way. Golf plus a pint in Pembrokeshire: see pages 26–29 for more on this lip-smacking combination.

Follow in the footsteps of Monty's men

The nail-biting conclusion to The 2010 Ryder Cup at Celtic Manor in Newport has gone down in history. Play the Twenty Ten Course and find out if you could have sunk the putt that won it for Europe. Just think: it's like driving the Monaco circuit or playing at Wimbledon.

For more on Monty see pages 30-31.

Special Offa

Offa's Dyke was built in the 8th century to keep the English and Welsh apart. Play hilltop Llanymynech and you'll be venturing back and forth across this ancient defence. Don't worry, we're friends these days so you'll have no trouble getting your ball back.

Why is Llanymynech one of Ian Woosnam's favourites?

And last but not least...

See pages 32-33.

SOME KEY DATES IN WELSH GOLFING HISTORY, ALONG WITH A FEW THINGS TO LOOK FORWARD TO

1888

TENBY GOLF CLUB

is founded, making it the oldest in Wales. But please don't mention this to Borth & Ynyslas members. Not everyone agrees with the official history, some claiming that Borth & Ynyslas was set up in 1885. Pontnewydd at Cwmbran says it's even older, tracing its birth back to 1875. So it's clubs at dawn, then. But whoever you believe, our long love of golf is a matter of record.

1895

CLUBS AT ABERDOVEY,

Borth & Ynyslas, Caernarvonshire, Glamorganshire,

Merionethshire, Porthcawl, Swansea Bay and Tenby come together to form the Welsh Golfing Union – the third oldest in the world after Ireland and Canada. The momentous event is marked by the first Welsh Amateur Tournament, staged at Aberdovey in the same year.

1898 INCONSISTENT

golfers the world over have a lot to thank us for. The Stableford scoring system, which allows games to remain competitive despite the occasional bad hole, is used for the first time at Glamorganshire Golf Club in Penarth.

1904

RADYR GOLF CLUB IN

Cardiff stages the first Welsh National PGA Championship just three years after the formation of the Professional Golfers' Association. Arthur Day lifts the trophy at the inaugural event, which will go on to be won by Welsh heroes like Bill Smalldon and Ian Woosnam.

1931

OUR RYDER CUP

connections begin here (admittedly they're not particularly auspicious).

Newport's Bert Hodson becomes the first Welshman to play in the competition, but he only lasts one game, losing to America's Densmore Shute. We're glad to report that things improved a bit later on, with Wales producing Ryder Cup greats like Dai Rees, Brian Huggett, Phil Price and Ian Woosnam. And, as the host country in 2010, a great Ryder Cup.

1934

MONARCHS HAVE BEEN

casting an eye over Harlech since medieval times when King Edward I built the clifftop castle that now looms over the golf course. The royal connection continues: His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, later King Edward VIII, becomes Captain of Royal St David's Golf Club in 1934, a continuation of a relationship between club and Crown following the Royal Patronage granted by King Edward VII in 1908.

1943

A RATHER SPECIAL

date in Wales's golfing history. Terry Matthews is born at the Lydia Beynon Maternity Hospital in Newport. It was the start of a long relationship with the place. Some years and a knighthood later, this hugely successful electronics entrepreneur returned and redeveloped the hospital as The Celtic Manor Resort. Oh. and he also happened to be instrumental in bringing the Ryder Cup to Wales in 2010.

1957

ABERDARE'S DAI REES

captains the winning Great Britain and Ireland Ryder Cup team at Lindrick Golf Club.

One of Wales's greatest ever golfers, Rees captained the Ryder Cup team five times and won 39 international titles.

1991

IAN WOOSNAM

becomes the first Welshman to clinch a Major, winning The Masters in Augusta. The skills that saw 'Woosie' pick up nearly 50 professional wins and captain a Ryder Cupwinning team in 2006 were honed on the hilltop greens of Llanymynech Golf Club.

2010

NOTHING TO REPORT.

really. Apart, that is, from a nail-biting Ryder Cup at The Celtic Manor Resort that enthralled a worldwide audience of countless millions when the European team secured victory by a single point on an unprecedented fourth day.

2012 THE WALES SENIOR

Open returns to Conwy and the Senior Tour calendar, with England's Bernard Lane emerging victorious. The competition heads south to Royal Porthcawl in 2013.

2014

ROYAL PORTHCAWL PLAYS HOST

to the Senior Open Championship, the first Major Championship to take place in Wales. While the historic links of Porthcawl have seen their fair share of big competitions, this is undoubtedly the biggest. And it doesn't end here. Should you miss it this time round, the Senior Open will return twice more to Welsh shores between 2014 and 2024.

golf as it should be

We think we know what a memorable golfing experience is all about. Start off with a huge choice of great courses in breathtaking locations. Add an unstuffy attitude, value for money and golf played in the true spirit of the game, whether you're on championship links or a cosy nine-holer. Then finish with a warm Welsh welcome on the greens and in the clubhouse. That's our take on 'golf as it should be'. But don't just listen to what we have to say. Here's what the players – the people who really matter – think

John Inverdale

1 'I used to dream of one day playing Royal Porthcawl as the sun was setting, and walking off the 18th having just holed a 20 footer to find Gareth Edwards having lined up the beers in the bar. It nearly happened. I three putted from eight feet. But the rest was as good as I ever imagined.'

Steve Rider

2 'I often think that the setting is an essential ingredient in ranking a links course ... put Royal St David's, Harlech at number one. If your golf game could remotely match the surroundings you would walk away ecstatically happy. This small golfing corner of Britain was a revelation to me. It wasn't just the great golf and exquisite settings; I found the whole experience to be sociable, welcoming and hassle free.'

Cees Rothengatter,

Groeningen, The Netherlands

3 'I recently played at Dolgellau, which was great. We're just not used to playing that kind of course in Holland. What I look for when I travel to play golf is great scenery and good hotels. Some nice weather is good too, but it's not that important. Having played in Scotland and Ireland, I can say that Wales compares very favourably.'

Helen Orton, Birmingham

4 'We've been to Nefyn for three consecutive years. With the views and the fact that you're so close to the sea, it is a fantastic course. Coming from the Midlands we play parkland courses, so it's nice to have a complete contrast. On top of that everybody is really friendly, both the staff and the members. They even recognise us now.'

Stephen Boland, Knutsford, Cheshire

5 'If I'm going to play as a visitor, I'll look for somewhere the green fees are reasonable, where it's not too crowded and where you feel welcome. Most importantly I'm looking for a good course which is well looked after and which offers a good challenge. I always feel very welcome at Bull Bay on Anglesey. It's one of the reasons we keep going back year after year.'

Paul van de Waal-Smith.

Liverpool

6 'Llanymynech is a special course because it's just different. It's picturesque and the holes are not just straight up and down. You need to play around. It's so friendly in the clubhouse and we've been back there three or four times in the past few years. I've also played at Llangollen. We travel from Liverpool because the courses are so good.'

Peter Crinella, California

7 'While not necessarily as famous as some I've played in Scotland and England, the courses in Wales are just as spectacular. They provide a great challenge, especially if you are not accustomed to links golf. I look for friendly and accommodating staff and members, and a course that is not overcrowded and has an organic character with at least a few unique (and therefore unforgettable) holes. Can there be a more exciting tee shot than the 13th at Nefyn? Or a more challenging hole than the 12th at Aberdovey? Are there a better nine holes than the inward nine at Porthmadog? Or a better 18 holes than Royal Porthcawl? I think not.'

Jimmy Kinsella, St Helens

8 'If you play places like Pwllheli, elsewhere in the country it's far more expensive and the courses often aren't as good. People here are really friendly and welcoming. There was a big smile on the pro's face when we met him. That says a lot. At some courses everything is over the top, far too pompous. It's much more relaxed here.'

Terry O'Shea, Cardiff

9 'At Priskilly Forest (in Pembrokeshire) the welcome from both staff and other players was fantastic. At the first tee, a chap came along and asked if he could join us. He knew the course really well and was able to show us around and give us some tips on how best to play it.'

See page 84 for location details for each club.

as you like it

You know what it's like nowadays. You go onto Amazon to buy a book and they tempt you with all kinds of alternative choices. 'If you like this,' they say, 'you'll also like...' It's the same with golf, especially here in Wales where there's certain to be a course to match your tastes – and then some more. Here are a few suggestions to get you started

DUNES. DREAMY DRIVES AND DARWINIAN CUNNING

Aberdovey

We're justifiably proud of our links golf – and Aberdovey is one of the many reasons why. Sandwiched between the shifting dunes of the Dyfi Estuary and the Snowdonia National Park's towering peaks, its layout is shaped as much by nature as its human designers, which include greats like Herbert Fowler and James Braid. A word of warning though: players seeking manicured greens and predictable conditions are destined to be disappointed. A game at wild and windswept Aberdovey is an elemental experience, a combination of rugged terrain and mercurial weather throwing up fresh challenges with every round.

One player who appreciated Aberdovey's rough-hewn charm was Bernard Darwin, the godfather of sports writers and grandson of naturalist Charles. As a child the future golf correspondent for The Times and Country Life witnessed the club's birth, when nine flowerpots were sunk into the ground to serve as makeshift holes. He went on to become one of the club's most committed members, describing Aberdovey as the place his 'soul loved best of all the courses in the world'.

Today, it remains easy to see why Darwin was so enamoured. Highlights of a round are numerous. The third hole requires a blind shot over rolling dunes, leaving you in suspense until you follow your ball towards the green. Elsewhere, the par-four 16th demands a precise drive between dense rough to the right and train tracks to the left in order to reach the small elevated green. aberdoveygolf.co.uk

Like the sound of that? Try these:

Ashburnham

A long-standing favourite. Weaving through the dunes on the shores of Carmarthen Bay, a round on Ashburnham's speedy greens sees players following in the footsteps of giants. Dai Rees, Bernard Gallagher and Sam Torrance all won tournaments here before going on to become Ryder Cup captains. ashburnhamgolfclub.co.uk

Prestatyn

The most northerly course on mainland Wales, Prestatyn is a challenging prospect regardless of the conditions. But when the prevailing south-westerly wind picks up, it becomes a test for any golfer. Things are kept fair by smooth, well-maintained greens, but you'll need to master the low punch shot to guarantee a successful round. prestatyngolfclub.co.uk

Royal Porthcawl

Quite possibly our most famous links course. Venue for the 2014 Senior Open Championship, Royal Porthcawl is the epitome of a classic coastal links. With holes facing all points of the compass, the wind blowing in off the Bristol Channel plays a significant but unpredictable role in every shot. royalporthcawl.com

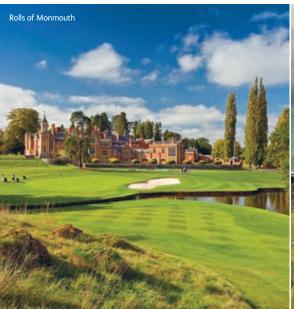

See page 84 for location details for each club.

PARKLAND

A CHOICE OF ROLLS ROYCE COURSES

Cradoc, Brecon

Wales isn't just about links, a fact ably demonstrated by the stunning parkland course at Cradoc. The course's mature treelined fairways belie its comparative youth. Laid out by designer CK Cotton in 1967, Cradoc offers classy golf in breathtaking surroundings. The course has become something of a pin up: golf photographers can't get enough of the views across to the highest peaks of the Brecon Beacons National Park. You'll love them too.

The golf more than lives up to the setting. Variety is key here, with holes ranging from precision par-threes to par-fives that will see you digging out your biggest clubs. The course's mountainous location is reflected in its layout, with some sharply pitched fairways and sloping greens adding an extra layer of challenge. Hazards abound; at just 125 yards the third would be simple if not for the pond between tee and green promising a watery end for any balls struck with insufficient power. Later, a tricky shot over trees lets you cut the corner at the dogleg 16th, prompting some tough decisions about risk and reward. The 19th hole is also worth a mention. Here, you'll find a warm welcome, cold drinks and the perfect setting to soak up those stunning views without the distraction of worrying about your swing.

cradoc.co.uk

Like the sound of that? Try these:

Gower Golf Club

You'd never know to look at it, but Gower is a relative newcomer to the Welsh golf scene, only converting from dairy farm to golf course in 1995. Laid out by designer Donald Steel (the man behind courses at St Andrews and Turnberry) Gower's rolling parkland can be deceptively tricky. Strategically placed bunkers and water hazards tempt you into risky shots, so be sure to take care before you swing. gowergolf.com

The Rolls of Monmouth

Long before it became a golf course, the very first Rolls Royce engine was built here. Today The Rolls of Monmouth reflects the heritage of its location, offering supremely refined golf in appropriately grand surroundings. Lush, tree-lined fairways and greens encircle historic Hendre House, the course's striking centre point.

therollsgolfclub.co.uk

Vale of Llangollen

Llangollen is well known for its annual International Eisteddfod, but its golf also attracts audiences from far and wide to one of North Wales's top inland courses. Laid out along the banks of the River Dee, Vale of Llangollen has a reputation as a challenging course and is a regular venue for professional and amateur events. Some reckon that the ninth is one of the best holes in British golf. vlgc.co.uk of these imposing mounds of sand, it's easy to see why the hole is dubbed 'Himalayas'. porthmadog-golf-club.co.uk

Like the sound of that? Try these:

Cardigan

An arresting blend of links, heath and clifftop, Cardigan is one of Wales's golfing gems. When veteran US golf writer Furman Bisher played here, he compared the views over the Teifi Estuary with those of Pebble Beach. Stiff sea breezes and thick course-side gorse complicate matters, so try not to get too caught up in the scenery. cardigangolf.co.uk

Nefyn & District

Though the ocean is visible from every hole on Nefyn's Old Course, the final eight take the sea views to another level. Set on a narrow strip of land projecting into the Irish Sea, with sheer cliffs to each side, it's the closest you'll come to playing on the deck of an aircraft carrier. Simply breathtaking. nefyn-golf-club.co.uk

Pyle & Kenfig

Laid out in twin loops of nine holes, the course affectionately known as 'P&K' is another game of two halves. Make your score on the front nine because the course's latter half sees players venturing into the dunes and ever closer to the sea. It gets pretty rugged, but persistence will be rewarded by the final three, which stake a claim to being among the finest closing holes in golf. pandkgolfclub.co.uk

LINKS PLUS

IT'S A GAME OF TWO HALVES, BRIAN

Porthmadog

Some days you can't decide: links or heathland, dunes or grass? You don't have to agonise at Porthmadog, an intriguing, bipolar course that's an excellent example of the hybrid experiences on offer in Wales, combining as it does nine holes of ruggedly pure links plus a further nine of rolling heathland. To paraphrase Match of the Day, it's definitely a course of two halves.

Founded 1905, its initial nine holes were laid out by legendary course designer James Braid. In the early days, golfers had to contend with more than just the course's inbuilt hazards. Livestock roamed across the fairways, with players expected to pay compensation if any were killed or injured by a wayward ball. Things aren't quite so wild nowadays, but Porthmadog still packs plenty of big challenges into its 6,322-yard length.

Set back from the sea, the first half of the course gives the best opportunity to build a decent score. Water comes into play at five holes and the long par-four fourth demands confident work with the driver. But it's on the back nine that things get really tough. Snaking through gargantuan dunes, the marker posts are essential if players aren't to lose their bearings. Signature hole is the par-four 14th, which requires a blind drive between two huge dunes. Teeing off in front

big man sings

Opera star Bryn Terfel spills the beans on his 'guilty pleasure' to Wales Golf Editor Huw Thomas

When did you first become interested in golf? What were your early experiences of playing?

When I first went to the Guildhall School of Music and Drama, a man there named Adrian Taylor was a golfer and we stole a couple of weekends away. We began first of all going to the driving range because they wouldn't allow you on to the course unless you had a handicap certificate. That's how my guilty pleasure within the golfing fraternity started.

Once I started in the profession, I discovered that at any given opera house there was bound to be someone who played golf. I found out very quickly who they were and the game became an important release for me. It really was nothing more than letting my hair down and allowing those notes and words to escape for three or four hours.

Are there any parallels between how you approach golf and your work on stage?

In my singing, I am governed by rules and regulations. I think how I perform, how I breathe and how I stand. All that goes through the window in my golf. I always think 'why did I hit that bad shot?' and it's always because the preparation isn't there. I can never get myself to think of it, so it's something I'm working on. In my singing, I am regulated by the skills I've learned over the past two decades, but where golf is concerned it's very different. As long as I can pull off the one great shot on the 18th, it's always enough to bring me back to play again.

Where in Wales do you particularly like playing? Where have you had some of your best experiences? My initial introduction to golf in Wales was at the courses near my home, like Caernarfon and Criccieth. Criccieth is a very small and beautiful little course set in the middle of agricultural land. Sheep and cows sometime venture onto the greens, but the panoramic view over Tremadog Bay from the top of the course is simply wonderful. When I'm at home in North Wales, I play each Tuesday with a group called the Tuesday Boys. We donate money at every game with all of it being passed on to charities at the end of the year. The wonderful thing about that is we get to go to different courses in North Wales, places like Porthmadog, Pwllheli, Caernarfon, Abergele, Nefyn, Abersoch and of course Royal St David's in Harlech. These are undoubtedly some of the great golf courses

What do you enjoy about playing golf in Wales?

In Wales, you get the camaraderie and the social element of the game. When I'm singing in Cardiff, I get invitations to Royal Porthcawl, Machynys and to the wonderful Celtic Manor. Unfortunately, in the throes of a very difficult international career my opportunities to play are few and far between. A game can take the whole day, so there just aren't that many moments I can steal on the golf course.

But I have found time for some memorable rounds here. Once, at Royal Porthcawl, Phillip Price and I took on Gareth Edwards and Jonathan Davies. Of course, I had the pro on my side so I didn't have to do too much, but still I wanted to perform well on home soil. As I stood there with Phillip Price I was struck by the unique set of circumstances in which I found myself. This guy had just beaten Phil Mickelson in the Ryder Cup at the Belfry and he was still as competitive in a fun match against Gareth Edwards and Jiffy, two of the most competitive people in Wales. We were tremendously victorious - Gareth and Jonathan didn't have a sniff but at the end of the round we had a good laugh and talked about the game and some of our favourite courses in Wales. We're very passionate people in our professions but we're also very passionate about our country and the golf in our country.

What are your perfect ingredients for a good round of golf?

For me it's all about the pure enjoyment of the situation you're in. I appreciate the game's etiquette and that's an essential element, but the social aspect is very important too. Many a deal is made on a golf course and in my profession it's a great opportunity to get to know your colleagues. The game gets rid of the barriers between me and the people I work with. If we've had a good round of golf it translates onto the operatic stage and helps to increase the chemistry.

I collect these rounds in my mind. I once read that you should never remember the bad putts, only the good ones. You'll still hit some bad ones, but at least you're staying positive.

What are your memories of The 2010 Ryder Cup at Celtic Manor?

Unfortunately I was in America at the time and had to settle for watching it on US TV. The weather seemed to be the one thing they were talking about constantly. It was wet in Wales, but the weather was atrocious throughout the British Isles. It would have been the same if it had been played at Gleneagles, Hoylake or anywhere else. It all worked out in the end because that extra day went down in the history of golf. It's something that won't ever be forgotten. Tiger Woods came back in the Ryder Cup during that final round and I just wish I could have been there.

A year before the Ryder Cup I was fortunate enough to play at Celtic Manor with Corey Pavin, Chris Evans and Colin Montgomerie. It gave me a real insight into the pressure involved in that game. The challenges I have on stage are very different to what I experienced that day. I went to the driving range and hit some balls and, as I was walking to the first tee, I suddenly pulled a muscle that I'd never pulled before in my life. Of course, I hid the fact that I was slightly injured and, thank goodness, my shot went down the middle. Pain aside, the next 18 holes playing with two icons of the game was magnificent.

What's it like playing with professionals like that? Is it intimidating when you're with such skilled players?

It just shows that we're all human. If they missed a putt, it really annoyed them. With Colin there's that slight edge where you wonder what's going to happen next. He was a true gentleman that day, a total professional and very passionate about that particular course. He copes with the pressure so well. To have 50 cameras stuck under your nose after every shot is quite an experience. I cannot imagine how that must have felt during the actual Ryder Cup.

Where in Wales is your all-time favourite place to play?

Royal St David's at Harlech has to be very high amongst all the golf clubs I've played, not just in Wales but across the world. It's a really good test of golf and having the castle in sight on every single shot really adds drama. It's something of a golfing cliché to say that each hole is different, but it's absolutely true at Royal St David's. You get to the back nine and it doesn't get any easier.

Whenever I play around the world I always have a map or trip planned for anybody I meet who wants to come to Wales. I tell them where to stay, where to play their golf and the things they can do off the course. I've enticed many an American over. The country has a lot to offer on a golfing front, but there are also the castles, the walks and the mountains. It's a great place to play golf and to visit.

happy families

Is there such a thing when golf-mad Dad, sane, long-suffering Mum and excitable kids go away together? Could good times really be had by all? We sent Jeremy Ellwood, Associate Editor of Golf Monthly magazine, to find out here can you play five different seaside courses without denting the petrol gauge, take a cablecar up a hill and a Victorian tram back down, and be within easy striking distance of a myriad of family attractions? The tram's the giveaway... it is, of course, Llandudno, which had previously eluded the holidaying Ellwoods.

As a UK-based golf journalist of some 13 years standing, I was no stranger to the wider golfing delights of North Wales. I'd written about the spectacular clifftop layout at Nefyn & District on the Llŷn Peninsula more times than I care to remember, dreaming of one day living close enough to savour its uniquely dramatic setting a little more often. And over the years I'd played, and enjoyed immensely, other courses along the northern strip, among them Abersoch, also on Llŷn; the excellent links at Prestatyn, mainland Wales's most northerly club; and the gorselined beauty of Bull Bay across the Menai Strait on Anglesey, the country's most northerly golfing outpost of all.

But Llandudno would be a first. Ellwood holiday Utopia would be golf and family in perfect harmony, with our Llandudno challenge to keep golfers (me) and non-golfers (wife Stella, 11-year-old Oliver and four-year-old Isabelle) equally happy. We arrived on London Olympics 'Super Saturday' to witness from our Imperial Hotel window a bustling promenade revelling in Team GB's success. But would all seem so rosy the next day as I headed to North Wales Golf Club, and the family to the acclaimed GreenWood Forest Park? After breakfast, during which Isabelle embarked on the three-day 'sausage-and-ketchup' diet which so amused the waiters, it was time to find out... but first, a quick family visit to Conwy Castle just down the road where there are towers and turrets galore for inquisitive young explorers.

My hosts at North Wales Golf Club were Imperial Hotel manager, Geoff Lofthouse, and son Nick, a rather good golfer. The course was much greener and softer than usual for the time of year, and although links courses are typically striving for firmer, faster conditions, I have to say it looked an absolute picture when the sun broke through. The greens were in superb condition, and the setting took some beating, with the Great Orme headland's rocky outcrops above Llandudno glinting in the sunlight as we turned back along the beach for a glorious stretch of holes from the ninth.

North Wales Golf Club is perhaps best known for the duo of criss-cross par-threes on 16 and 17, intriguingly named O.L. and then L.O. I'm not sure about the origins of these names, though I can imagine many a player with a good scorecard in his hand uttering something similar to O.L. standing on the 16th tee, where you can't see much more than the very top of the flag. They may be pretty short holes, but most golfers would still pay good money to par both with any sort of breeze blowing. I somehow managed to do just that, almost going one better with a narrow birdie miss on 17, but thought it would be churlish to offer them up for sale in the bar afterwards as we reflected on our game over a much needed cuppa.

'It looked an absolute picture when the sun broke through!'

Out on the course we'd gratefully watched ominous clouds drift past and ignore us, but the family weren't so lucky. 'Everyone soaked right through, but kids won't come in!' my wife's text read — a glowing tribute to GreenWood's fun factor. Later, we strolled along the prom beyond Wales's longest pier up to the cablecar station to take the aerial route to the Great Orme's summit. I spent the journey looking for tell-tale signs of a long-lost golf course; Stella, who doesn't do heights, stared intently at her feet throughout! Inevitably, we returned by tram, with the kids excitedly racing for the best seats at the halfway station where you have to change.

Next day, while the family explored Llandudno, it was an early morning visit to the highly regarded links at Conwy for me with Geoff and Roger Lewis, regional co-ordinator for Golf North Wales. Conwy is a links of some considerable repute, its excellent layout complemented by the views, whether out to sea or inland to the majestic bulk of Snowdonia. Again, the course looked a real vision in the morning sun, with its verdant fairways and that stirring mountain backdrop, nowhere more prominent than on the testing par-three 13th with its two-tier green. In the right light, the mountains seem so close that you feel you could almost reach out and touch them.

There's often a little room to manoeuvre on the early holes at Conwy, with the pretty but well-protected par-three second and risk-reward third along the estuary (well worth the risk downwind in my humble opinion!) setting a good early benchmark. Later on there are some excellent holes that will really test your mettle in any sort of breeze. As for 'room to manoeuvre', well, that goes out of the window down the final stretch where the gorse really closes in on you, placing an ever-growing premium on accuracy as you fight to keep your hard-won score intact all the way to the clubhouse.

Shortly after I played Conwy, the finest players on the European Senior Tour descended on the course for the annual Wales Senior Open. Though they doubtlessly scored considerably better than me, I would find it hard to believe they could have enjoyed it quite as much. I'd wanted to play Conwy for many years, ever since first seeing photos of the links in its full glory, and can safely say that on finally getting to tee it up here, it delivered in full.

WHAT OLIVER DID WHEN DAD PLAYED GOLF

'We headed to GreenWood Forest Park, where there was masses to do. I went straight to the archery area to practise what I'd imagined at Conwy Castle, and we then went on the donkeys, the jungle boats, the crocodile maze and the moon karts. Best of all was the "Great Green Run" where Izzie and I enjoyed hurtling down a steep slope on a sledge.'

WHAT ISABELLE LIKED MOST

'Our big hotel room. Mummy said it was bigger than our house. I enjoyed swimming in the hotel's pool, and the sausages were scrummy too! We got very wet on the sledges, but I didn't want to stop as it made them very fast. I was a bit scared at first at Ropes and Ladders, but really liked the wobbly bridge and the tunnel. The best bit was the wire thing you zoom down at the end.'

Next stop was en famille at the Ropes and Ladders high-ropes adventure centre in Llanberis, our pick of the town's many attractions, which include the Snowdon Mountain Railway. Selflessly, we let the kids lap up all the high-wire fun while we stayed on terra firma in a supporting role. After a few nervy moments, Oliver soon found his feet, and by the end he was hurtling fearlessly down the lengthy zip wire and dangling from a crazy oversized swing.

After a quick dip in the hotel pool followed by dinner (sausages of course for Isabelle) it was time for one final treat – tickets for Grease at Llandudno's excellent theatre. It was great fun, although a worn-out Isabelle did finally nod off during a rousing rendition of Greased Lightning. As we left next morning we were all belting out, 'Summer lovin', had me a blast', for Llandudno had indeed been a blast.

But we had much unfinished business – for me, three more courses in Maesdu, which plays right alongside North Wales, and like the latter, hosted the prestigious PGA Championship back in the 1950s; Rhos-on-Sea just beyond the Little Orme, a long-established club with glorious views where you can play and stay at very reasonable rates; and Penmaenmawr, a gem of a nine-holer a couple of miles west, right at the foot of those mountains you see from Conwy. For the kids, there was so much else, I wouldn't know where to start. But I wasn't allowed to go to sleep that night until I'd promised we'd go back soon.

Bayside and bunkered

A few golfing celebs: The Celtic Manor Resort (Newport), Royal Porthcawl, The Vale Resort (Vale of Glamorgan).

More star quality: Pyle & Kenfig, The Rolls of Monmouth, Southerndown.

And for families? Go bayside in Cardiff and Swansea. Wales's capital is awash with attractions - fun and fascinating museums, hands-on science experiences and timebending Doctor Who, plus a fantasy castle seemingly teleported into the city centre. Swansea folk love the sea. The aquatic adventures (including indoor surfing) on tap at The LC leisure centre make it one of the most popular attractions in Wales. And new kid on the block is the 360 Beach and Watersports Centre, in pole position on the prom. The Valleys are close by. They're famously warm and welcoming, and wear their heritage with pride at places like Big Pit National Coal Museum and Rhondda Heritage Park. You can also do all kinds of outdoorsy things, including mountain biking and gorge walking.

On the previous pages Jeremy Ellwood and family told us what they got up to in North Wales. Now it's your turn to pack the car with kids and clubs for a golfcum-family break that everyone will enjoy. There's so much variety in this small country of ours, both on and off course. You'll find details of all our courses beginning on page 36, but here are a few ideas to get you going.

Gardens and greens

A few golfing celebs: Ashburnham (Burry Port), Machynys Peninsula Golf & Country Club (Llanelli), Tenby.

More star quality: Carmarthen, Newport, Parc Garnant (Ammanford). And for families? Carmarthenshire, the green-fingered 'Garden of Wales', is home to the amazing National Botanic Garden, which extends a big welcome to families. There's golden sand as well as green, green grass - lots of it along Carmarthen Bay and at activity-packed Pembrey Country Park. Pembrokeshire is also very green – in more ways than one. Its eco-credentials are impeccable. Porpoises and dolphins swim in the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park's clear, clean waters, seabirds nest along its protected shorelines - and the children just love the gorgeous beaches, not to mention attractions like Oakwood Theme Park and Heatherton World of Activities.

Trains and tees

A few golfing celebs: Aberdovey, Borth & Ynyslas, Royal St David's (Harlech).

More star quality:

Aberystwyth, Cardigan, Dolgellau. And for families? Steam-power, courtesy of the Great Little Trains of Wales, suits the scenery, especially when you're chuffing up a beautiful valley on the Vale of Rheidol or Talyllyn railways. There are dramatic underground attractions too, like Ponterwyd's Silver Mountain Experience and King Arthur's Labyrinth at Corris. Down in the woods, the pioneering, eye-opening Centre for Alternative Technology is full of ingenious energy-saving devices. Pedalpower is a pretty green way to go too and easy on those little legs in the Coed y Brenin Forest's gentle family mountain biking trails. And everyone also enjoys the beaches, coves and headlands of Ceredigion's Heritage Coast.

Birds and birdies

A few golfing celebs: Llandrindod Wells, Llanymynech, Welshpool.

More star quality: Cradoc

(Brecon), Builth Wells, Summerhill (Hayon-Wye).

And for families? Golfers might find them a bit of a distraction but kids love to see red kites, the rare bird of prey. Gigrin Farm near Rhayader is a feeding centre (the birds turn up, bang on time, at 3pm in the summer, so don't be late). For a bird's-eye view of the hills take to the saddle – easily done, for there's a particularly good choice of riding centres in Wales's rural heartlands. The narrow-gauge Welshpool and Llanfair Light Railway is another scenic rural ride. And don't miss country fairs and agricultural shows, where farming mixes with family fun.

Castles and clubs

A few golfing celebs: Holyhead, Nefyn & District, Porthmadog

More star quality: Bull Bay (Anglesey), Maesdu (Llandudno), Pwllheli And for families? It's one of the best ways to get kids fired up about history and heritage. Take them to the battlements of Caernarfon, Conwy or Beaumaris castles. This trio of medieval fortresses, all UNESCO World Heritage Sites, are high in atmosphere and drama, especially when medieval re-enactments take place within their walls. Snowdonia is teeming with places to visit – slate mines and adventure centres, country parks and farm parks, little railways and big mountains. You'll also want to hop across the Menai Strait to Anglesey

For further information and contact details for these attractions, see page 83. Regional guides for all courses start on page 36.

Gaols and holes

A few golfing celebs: Prestatyn, Vale of Llangollen, Wrexham.

More star quality: Abergele, Mold, Northop Country Park (near Flint). And for families? Kids love shiverdown-the-spine Ruthin Gaol, now a heritage centre but still chillingly authentic. The 'upstairs, downstairs' living history at the National Trust's Erddig mansion, Wrexham, is a little more genteel. Down in the Vale of Llangollen, cruise the 'canal in the sky' across the dizzy Pontcysyllte Aqueduct, a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Bikes, ponies and feet are the way to go when exploring the lovely Clywdian Range, an 'Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty' crossed by 8th-century Offa's Dyke. For sand between your toes and a taste of candyfloss go beside the seaside at Prestatyn, Rhyl and Colwyn Bay.

drive time

Classic holes come with the golfing territory in Wales. Here we feature some crème de la crème favourite holes – 18 in total – personally chosen by the professionals from each club with tips on how best to play them

It's a card wrecker.'

Marriott St Pierre. Old Course (near Chepstow)

Paul Collins: It's essentially a 237-yard carry over water to the green. For most people it's a driver. There's out of bounds on the left, so it's best to hit it slightly down the right. It's a tough hole and very few people manage to hit the green.

marriott.co.uk

'Death or glory on the Gower Peninsula.'

Langland Bay

Mark Evans: There's trouble everywhere. If you over club you're in the thick gorse and grass at the back. Pull it left and you're down the bank covered with gorse and heather, to the right and you're over the cliff and into the sea. Aim for the right half of the green and allow it to drift in from the bank. langlandbaygolfclub.com

'A hole that people always remember.'

The Rolls of Monmouth

Simon Aston: It's a par-three with a bunker guarding the right side and water to the front and right. If you overshoot the hole, putting down the slope is pretty tricky. Club selection is really important. You have to carry the water but not go past the hole. Standing at the tee there's a great view of the mansion in the background.

therollsgolfclub.co.uk

'A club champion seven putted from about 10ft.'

Pennard (Gower)

Mike Bennett: It's a par-five into the prevailing wind with a spectacular view across Oxwich and Three Cliffs Bay. If you hit two really good shots, you can get on in two. But reaching the green is only half the job. pennardgolfclub.com

'It's hit and miss.'

Bangor St Deiniol

Glyn Hughes: If you're a long hitter with a decent lie for your second shot you can go over the top aiming for the mobile phone mast above and behind the green. Alternatively you can play it safe, hit it up to the next marker and leave yourself about 150 yards to the green.

bangorstdeiniolgolfclub.co.uk

'One of the hardest holes on the course.'

Aberdovey

Andy Humphreys: There's an elevated green with slopes to the left and right with the sea on the right-hand side, so the wind normally comes across the course. The best approach is a punch shot into the green with a seven or eight iron and trying to keep the ball down. As soon as it gets above the dunes it's going to hook to the left. aberdoveygolf.co.uk

'You've got safe and you've got dead.'

Llandrindod Wells

Phil Davies: If the conditions are good, you can go straight for the green. If you pull the shot off you're going to make the hole in three or four. But there is thick gorse and bracken on the right and to the left is out of bounds.

lwgc.co.uk

'In recent years there have been 12s and 13s.'

Borth & Ynyslas

John Lewis: It's early in the round and you've got out of bounds virtually all the way up the right-hand side and water hazards all the way up the left. Practise before you start, for it's the third full shot of the day. The majority of people slice into the out of

borthgolf.co.uk

'Needs a delicate shot to an island green.'

The Vale Lake Course, (Vale of Glamorgan)

Matthew Coombs: There are water hazards along the left and on the right there's a bunker about 220 yards out. You'll find the odd person who hits a driver over the water, but it is a very small green so it's difficult to stop on it. You only have to carry it about 250 yards but you have to be accurate. vale-hotel.com

'It's hit or bust.'

John Peters: The key to playing the hole is all about finding the fairway from the tee shot. You're generally playing into a prevailing wind so keep the ball nice and low. You'll be hitting your driver because it's a long hole. If you take a little less, you're making the hole just as difficult. The shorter you hit it off the tee, the more difficult the second shot becomes.

southerndowngolfclub.com

'A tough hole when the wind is blowing.'

Morlais Castle (Merthyr Tydfil)

Huw Jarrett: It's a nice par-three with some beautiful views over Merthyr Tydfil. It's a simple hole, just hit it into the middle of the green. Off the white tees you'll want to use a six or five iron depending on what the wind is doing. For the average golfer you could be up to a four or three iron. morlaiscastlegolf.co.uk

'Short of the green the ball rolls back and anything long is dead.'

Tenby

Rhys Harry: Confident golfers under normal wind conditions hit a driver over the fairway bunkers, leaving a short pitch into a tricky sloping green. Your drive needs to leave you down the left-hand side to open up the green and leave a fairly short pitch. tenbygolf.co.uk

'It's a proper dogleg you attack at your peril.'

Ashburnham (Burry Port)

Martin Stimson: You've got five bunkers down the left and the green is protected by a small mound. Basically, the further right you go, the harder the second shot. A better golfer should hit a draw off the tee with a driver or three wood to have an easier second shot. Just keep right, whatever you do. ashburnhamgolfclub.co.uk

'A daunting tee shot with dunes each side.'

Royal St David's (Harlech)

Gareth Lewis: You're hitting slightly across the fairway as it doglegs to the right. You can only see the top of the flag on your second shot and you're hitting almost down an alley of dunes, with not a lot of margin for error. It's a tough tee shot and a tough second shot. For many it'll be a tough third shot too. royalstdavids.co.uk

BIG HITTERS

Pro golfers can manage on average over 360 yards, amateurs a mere 200. But in 1974 Mike Austin smashed the world record in Las Vegas with a long shot of 515 yards, an achievement that still stands today. Oh, and he was 64 at the time. What would he have made of two of the longest holes in Wales, the monster 690-yard 'Forest' at Dewstow Golf Club, Caerwent, or the 607-yard second hole at the Vale Resort's Wales National Course, near Cowbridge?

'The longest hole on the course.'

Pwllheli

Stuart Pilkington: If you use your driver your shot lands at the narrowest point of a slightly bottlenecking fairway with the river on the left and gorse on the right. If you don't use your driver you end up having to hit over the river and you've got quite a challenge to get to the green in two. pwllheligolfclub.co.uk

'Inseparable back-toback par-threes.'

North Wales (Llandudno)

Roy Williams: You have to be pretty accurate to hit the 16th green. There's a big valley in front of it so you have to make the carry. It always plays into the prevailing wind so you can use up to a three or four iron. The 17th is shorter, but you're hitting over a ravine to a sloped green so if you're short you'll end up in the bottom of it. northwalesgolfclub.co.uk

'One of the best second holes in British golf.'

Royal Porthcawl

Peter Evans: The green is right next to the sea which makes it extremely open and exposed. The trick is a good tee shot as far to the right-hand side of the fairway as possible to open the green up. If you can get through with a five then you've done really well.

Welshpool

Dave Rowlands: Tee off with a three wood or utility wood, keeping right and avoiding the out of bounds on the left, and short of the water hazard for the long ball. Keep left on your second shot as everything falls to the right, drop the ball short of the green as a steep slope runs into it. welshpoolgolfclub.co.uk ## great scot!

He may well have been Scottish, but legendary course designer James Braid did some of his best work in Wales

T f you've spent any time with a golf club in your hands, you've probably heard of James Braid. As part of the 'Great Triumvirate' with Harry Vardon and John Henry Taylor, he won five Open Championships between 1901 and 1910, before retiring from professional golf and reinventing himself as a course designer.

Though he's best known for his work at clubs like Carnoustie, Troon and Gleneagles in his native Scotland, many Welsh courses have also been touched by Braid's genius and golfing vision, from Holyhead's heathland in the north to the links of Tenby in the south.

What are the characteristic, tell-tale signs that Braid has been at work? He was a firm believer in choice, always ensuring that there were at least two ways to play his holes. Do you take a gamble on the tricky route in search of a lower score, or play it safe to avoid a higher one? A great example can be seen on the 11th at Pwllheli, where players must pick between a long drive to the narrow fairway or a shorter shot that brings bunkers into play. Braid understood that the interplay between risk and reward was central to an enjoyable game of golf, even if making the wrong decision could prove frustrating.

Another Braid signature is a varied range of par-threes that differ in direction and length, allowing meteorology – in the form of capricious wind – to come into play, posing a different challenge at each hole. He also liked to guard his greens with bunkers and slopes, forcing players to think carefully about their approach. You can see this at Maesdu, Llandudno, where the par-three 12th's undulating green is well protected by yawning pot bunkers.

Despite his illustrious golfing career, Braid was never much of a traveller. He suffered from terrible motion sickness and would use topographic maps to plan out courses before visiting them. As a result, his courses highlight the lay of the land, making inspired use of cartographic features. Standing amid the imposing dunes at Porthmadog, you can't help but feel this approach works particularly

He certainly had his own style, but the varied nature of the terrain in Wales means that Braid's take on 'golf as it should be' comes in all shapes and sizes.

HIT > THE JAMES BRAID TRAIL

It's reckoned that James Braid had a hand in laying out 20 courses in Wales. The North Wales James Braid Trail (jamesbraidtrail.co.uk) brings together 10 of these and is the ideal way to experience just what made his designs so special. Each club on the trail has a signature hole that typifies the Braid style. You'll also get a scorecard to record your progress after playing each club. Matching Braid's achievements is a tough ask in anyone's book, but you'll at least have proof that you walked in his footsteps.

a little birdie told me...

Nowadays, golf isn't the preserve of crusty colonels. It's the people's game – especially here in unstuffy Wales – played by everyone, young and old. Ben Thompson, Andrew Bailey and Ian Williams are serious golfing enthusiasts with a serious Twitter addiction. We asked them to put the two together on a Welsh golfing weekend – their first such visit to Wales – and live-tweet the experience of playing two of Pembrokeshire's most beautiful courses, Trefloyne and Tenby

Name: Ben Thompson Age: 36 Golf experience: Taking his boss up on an offer of free lessons 10 years ago, Ben has been a keen golfer ever since. Two young kids mean he doesn't get to play as much these days, but when he does it tends to be somewhere spectacular: Turnberry, Kiawah Island in South Carolina, California's Half Moon Bay. Business trips have their perks.

Favourite course: The Boulders, Arizona

Name: Andrew Bailey Age: 36

Golf experience: Picking up the game as a teenager, Andrew played off 14 in his early 20s thanks to multiple rounds each week, natural ability – and an extremely forgiving wife. A former member at Saltford Golf Club near Bath, he's now back in the golfing groove and rapidly bringing his handicap down to past glories.

Favourite course: Isle of Purbeck, Dorset

Name: Ian Williams Age: 35 Golf experience: Something of a late starter when it comes to golf, Ian has embraced the game with all the enthusiasm of a man finally facing up to the fact he'll never play professional football. Shift-work means he has plenty of golf-friendly time on his hands; it also means cheaper green fees, which is nice. Now a golf addict.

Favourite course: Bransford, Worcestershire

DAY 1

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

Not sure how we got sign-off from our better halves, but clubs are packed, tee-times booked & we're on our way from Bristol to Tenby. Thx @VisitWales!

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams @Bengethin @Birdscanbebig and I en-route to Wales. Golf, Tenby and inane ramblings to look forward to. But first: coffee!

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams Croeso i Gymru!

Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig After a two-and-a-half-hour drive, we're here! Fourcroft bang on the seafront is a nice hotel. Now to sample the local ales...

Ben Gethin Thompson

Contrary to what my father-inlaw said ('too many tourists'), Tenby is great. Beautiful beach, quaint harbour, no tourist tat perfect!

DAY 2

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

Can't beat being woken by the sound of surf on sand. Check out the hotel view! Anyone for golf? @Realianwilliams @Birdscanbebig

Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig Great brekkie, good work #FourcroftHotel. Not a fan of black pudding but @Bengethin and @RealIanWilliams are shovelling it down. #delicious Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams Arrived at @Trefloyne for first golf of w/kend. Course looks amazing: mix of long par 5s and trickier par 4s, inc. a quarry! Off we go!

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams The prospect of cameras on the tee-box for the first hole is drawing quite a crowd. Brilliant! #feellikeacelebrity Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig My favourite thing about golf: being barracked by (friendly) locals on the first tee. Only one way to silence the doubters! #hitandhope

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

Trees for @RealIanWilliams. Perhaps that final glass of wine last night was unnecessary #golf #Trefloyne

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams @Birdscanbebig keeps shaking his head when noting down my scores. Think he's judging me. #dontjudgemeimbetterthanthis

Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig Quote @RealIanWilliams: 'I haven't hit a straight one all day!' Try the @ClevelandGolfHalo hybrid club, it's working for @Bengethin. Shot!

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin Loving this course! Think @Birdscanbebig is as well – look at that swing.

Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig All safely round the quarry. No need to get the abseiling gear out...

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams At last, a birdie attempt. Missed, naturally. Glad I spent all that time on the putting green earlier...

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

'Suffice to say I won't be submitting today's card for a handicap.' Never mind @RealIanWilliams there's always tomorrow!

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

Really enjoyed the golf. Now downtime back at the @Fourcroft Hotel; time for a post-round relax by the pool...

Remember: even though you're drinking it from a fancy continental-style glass, it's still #StellaArtois. Tomorrow's round might suffer!

DAY 3

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

Links course today & weather's taken turn for the worse. Could be tough. Glad we decided against that nightclub. #earlynight #goodcall Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig Never been to Tenby before but will definitely be coming back. Great golf, great town, great first impression. Can't wait to try out #TenbyGolfClub today!

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

Yesterday's sunshine lulled us into a false sense of security. What do you mean it rains sometimes in Wales? #whoknew

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams A break in the clouds! Time for a quick photo, then hit the links before it starts chucking it down! #playtheconditions

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

'The course map says this way. So why did your drive go that way?' If I could answer that I'd be a very rich man, sir.

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

@RealIanWilliams hitting it nicely. Last thing he needs is his phone going off at the top of his backswing. @Birdscanbebig looks guilty.

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams Swear I just saw a Tellytubby disappear into that sand trap. #tenbygolf

Ian Williams @RealIanWilliams Much better putting from everyone today, rain slowing the greens down. Toughest bit is finding the greens in the first place. #accuracyiskey

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

@RealIanWilliams @Birdscanbebig There's more rough around here than that trip to the scrumpy farm we did last year:-) Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig Nice hit @Bengethin! Five yards to the left and that would've been perfect. As it is you'll struggle to find it:)

Andrew Bailey @Birdscanbebig The sun's come out. This can only improve things. Shame the round's nearly over:)

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

The course at Tenby is stunning – but pretty unforgiving! Next stop: the pro shop for a load more balls. @RealIanWilliams @Birdscanbebig

Ben Gethin Thompson

@Bengethin

Cracking round from @Birdscanbebig, 5 pars in a row. Much improved on vesterday @RealIanWilliams. Me? Good back 9, let's forget the front :)

@Bengethin

W/end of great courses & company. 1st Welsh golf experience a huge success, definitely be back for more. Just need to convince the wives #buyflowers&chocsonwayhome

colin's celtic gold

He's had some success during his time, but Colin Montgomerie rates his captaincy of the winning European team in the 2010 Ryder Cup, played at The Celtic Manor Resort, Newport, as his career highlight. Here, he recounts his feelings in an extract from his recent autobiography he proudest moment of my career. That is what being captain of the European Ryder Cup team meant to me. Were I to win the Open, or any one of the majors – something which is perhaps becoming a bit improbable at this stage of my career – I'd be thrilled. So would my family. But it wouldn't come close to how I felt when I was presented with the Ryder Cup in 2010 at Celtic Manor. It wouldn't come close. The Ryder Cup will always have pride of place in my trophy cabinet regardless of what impressive piece of silverware might be sitting next to it...

The denouement of the 2010 match was virtually unwatchable as everything came down to the final single, the one between Graeme (McDowell) and Hunter Mahan. The American, who needed a half-point if the US were to hang on to the trophy, had clawed his way back from three down after 11 to be only one to the bad with three to play...(but) the American's par putt failed to find the hole.

Europe had won the Ryder Cup, with the result a nail-biting  $14\frac{1}{2}$  points to  $13\frac{1}{2}$ . Half of Europe converged on the green and a roar carried through the Usk Valley.

After all the hugs and tears in the immediate aftermath of our victory, I went on some kind of mental walkabout... I was in one hell of a state, an out and out wreck.

The emotions of the previous four days had well and truly caught up with me. Once back in the Twenty Ten Clubhouse, I found myself a quiet corner in the locker room. And, at a time when I should have been going over and over the captain's closing-ceremony speech (my friends had kindly advised that it would be heard by an audience of some 160 million), my thoughts were all over the place ...

'We expected a great match, we expected great support, with the world watching Wales delivered.'

MONTY ON HIS BEST HOLES IN GOLF How could I talk about my favourite 18 holes of golf and not include Celtic Manor? The 500-yard 16th has to be the hole for me, the one where Graeme McDowell secured the point we needed to win the Ryder Cup. Yet it also happens to be the best hole on the course. You have to split two bunkers with your drive before tackling a downhill second to the green. But what am I going on about...? If you want to know how to play it properly, I suggest you turn to your 2010 Ryder Cup DVD, if you have one, and watch how that brave Ulsterman made his birdie.

AND FROM THE FANS' PERSPECTIVE '... they seek the Holy Grail, when extraordinary achievement unfolds before their eyes and when pride and pleasure coalesce in a memory to endure down the years. In short, they yearn for another Ryder Cup. The mud and the din and the glory of that day in South Wales represented the ultimate spectator experience. It was the pinnacle of my gleeful journey.'

From Among the Fans by Patrick Collins, published by Wisden Sports Writing.

Never played golf in Wales? NBC TV sports commentator Mark Rolfing explains just why it's worth the trip all the way across the Atlantic

star spangled angle

'Regardless of who you are or where you've come from. you will be welcomed with open arms.'

ike many avid American golfers my first visit to Wales was a real eye-opener. In fact, I was so astonished with the quality and variety of the golf this small country has to offer that I immediately began to favourably compare Wales's links adventures to some of its more famous neighbours in the UK.

For a start, the courses are user-friendly. They are challenging but not brutally demanding; believe me, you will play some of your best golf here. Even at the most revered clubs, visitors are almost always warmly welcomed both on the course and in the clubhouse. Then there's the issue of cost. Playing golf in Wales is surprisingly affordable. Maybe it's because many of the venues don't have the bigname reputations of some other UK courses, but the value for money is a very welcome feature.

Wales may be small in size but it comes up big on my list of must-visit British golf destinations. The country is divided geographically into distinct regions, each with its own spectacular topography and wide-ranging style of courses. Having said that, you'll find one of my favourite things about Welsh golf everywhere, from north to south. The people here are some of the warmest and friendliest I have ever met. Regardless of who you are or where you've come from, you will be welcomed with open arms.

With towering peaks and rugged coastline, North Wales is blessed with dramatic and stunning scenery. Alongside this natural beauty comes a choice of amazing links layouts. Royal St David's is probably the best known and playing there in the shadow of mighty, medieval Harlech Castle, a World Heritage Site, is a humbling experience. Nefyn & District Golf Club, famously set on a narrow peninsula jutting into the Irish Sea, is one of the most striking I have encountered in all my travels, reminding me somewhat of Pebble Beach. Travelling around this part of Wales I came upon hidden jewels too, such as Porthmadog where the back nine that played out towards the sea simply took my breath away.

While Mid Wales is well known for its fine parkland courses, it was here that I discovered the historic links of Aberdovey, the biggest surprise of my trip. Bernard Darwin, who frequented the area on summer holidays, got it right well over 100 years ago when he said, 'about this one course in the world, I am a hopeless and shameful sentimentalist and I glory in my shame'. His sentiments live on: Aberdovey is a terrific golf course that you won't want to miss.

The south, home to Wales's capital, Cardiff and the majority of the nation's population, is where the widest range of golf options can be found. Best known to an international audience is Celtic Manor Resort at Newport, host of the thrilling 2010 Ryder Cup, which boasts two more championship parkland courses alongside the world-class Twenty Ten, the first course in history built specifically for the Ryder Cup.

Go further west and you come to Tenby, the oldest club in Wales with a compact links layout just minutes from the centre of this pretty Georgian seaside resort. On the way to Tenby you simply must play Pennard on the Gower Peninsula near Swansea, an intriguing course with a classic coastal layout some 200ft above sea level that attracts the poetic description of 'the links in the sky'.

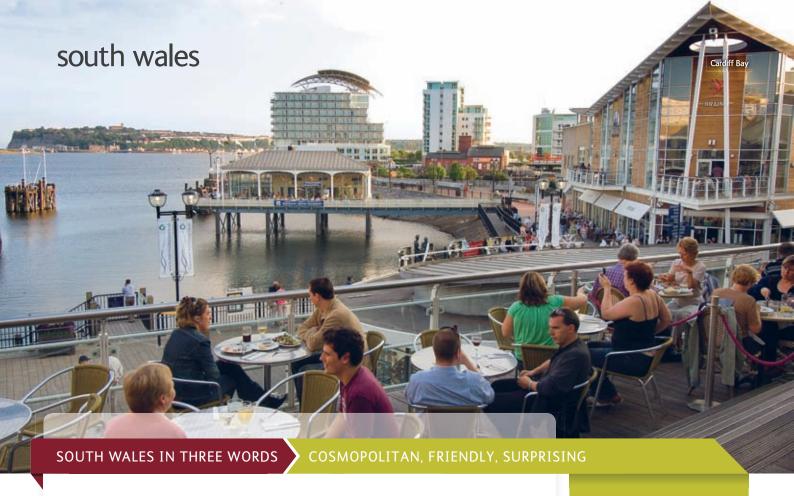

South Wales also has the best course in all the land, Royal Porthcawl. Big and bold, this is championship links golf at its best. Some day Royal Porthcawl should host an Open Championship. The Senior Open Championship will be played here in 2014, a step in the right direction.

Golf in Wales has a special place in my heart and I know there are still many more experiences yet to be discovered. I'd encourage anyone to make the trip and get their own taste of 'golf as it should be'.

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

Par-71. Par-70. Par-69. Three pars to aim for when you play The Celtic Manor Resort's trio of parkland courses: the Twenty Ten (we guess you know what this one is famous for), Roman Road and Montgomerie. Two neighbouring venues also offer Rolls Royce golf – quite literally in the case of The Rolls at Monmouth, home of motoring pioneer Charles Stuart Rolls, and Marriott St Pierre, Chepstow which, like Celtic Manor, is no stranger to major competitions. Further afield, Monmouthshire Golf Club at Abergavenny is a mature parkland course that 'can be as tough as it is beautiful'.

It's difficult to single out any of the 17 clubs in the Cardiff area – you'll just have to stay and play them all. Further north, the South Wales

Valleys are full of splendid venues, many in spectacular hilltop locations. Moorland Morlais Castle at Merthyr Tydfil looks out across the Brecon Beacons, while West Monmouthshire at Brynmawr says it has the highest tee in Great Britain (which must be true, because the Guinness Book of Records agrees). Other Valleys favourites include Bryn Meadows near Ystrad Mynach, complete with a luxury hotel and spa. The Vale Resort, in the pastoral Vale of Glamorgan is another parkland venue where golf comes with all kinds of luxury extras. And there's yet more superb parkland golf at nearby Cottrell Park Golf Resort's two courses. Wales is renowned for its links golf, and here you will find three of the finest - Southerndown, Pyle & Kenfig and the daddy of them all, Royal Porthcawl.

GIVE ME FIVE GOOD REASONS TO GO OFF-COURSE

- 1 Go down to the woods in the lovely Wye Valley, then visit the soaring, majestic ruin of Tintern Abbey.
- 2 See what's happening on the bay at Cardiff quite a lot, actually, from arty productions at the Wales Millennium Centre to cappuccino-sipping on the waterfront.
- 3 Glimpse into the past at Big Pit National Coal Museum, Blaenavon (left) quite literally when you descend 300ft by pit cage on an underground conducted tour.
- 4 Walk a stretch of the spectacular, cliff-backed Glamorgan Heritage Coast.
- 5 See what the Romans got up to at Caerleon. Isca, one of their major towns, has a well-preserved amphitheatre and fascinating fortress baths.

WHY GO? Why not? South

Cardiff Golf Club is a mature parkland course, founded in 1922. Very little of the outside world is visible from within our tree-lined course, in fact it would be easy to imagine that you are in the heart of the Welsh countryside rather than two miles from the centre of Cardiff. Each hole has its own individual character with subtle slopes, large mature trees and a meandering stream on eight of the holes providing a stiff but enjoyable challenge.

Senior Open Championship comes to Royal Porthcawl in 2014

In July 2014, Royal Porthcawl plays host to the Senior Open Championship, the first Major Championship to take place in Wales. While the historic links of Porthcawl have seen their fair share of top competitions in their time, this is undoubtedly the biggest. Previous winners include players like Bob Charles, Bernhard Langer, Gary Player and Tom Watson. By the time 2014 rolls around, names such as Colin Montgomerie, Miguel Angel Jiménez and Davis Love III will be eligible for the competition, so we can expect a stellar turnout in Wales from players and fans alike. And it doesn't end here. Should you miss it this time round, the Senior Open will return twice more to Welsh shores between 2014 and 2024.

WEST WALES IN THREE WORDS

POETIC, CELTIC, SCENIC

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

It's in the lap of the gods when you play the short 16th 'Death or Glory' hole at Langland Bay on the Gower Peninsula. Gower boasts some of Wales's finest courses, including Pennard, the legendary 'links in the sky' overlooking Three Cliffs Bay, where you'll need to look out for the ruined castle when teeing off from the seventh. Swansea, Wales's freshfaced 'Waterfront City', is also well blessed with clubs - Clyne's downland course, for example, has more of those intoxicating sea views that famous son Dylan Thomas described in his poems and short stories.

Go westward for more golfing gold. Jack Nicklaus had a hand in designing the modern links championship course at Machynys Peninsula Golf and Country Club, a relative newcomer that has been wowing golfers since its opening in 2005. In contrast, Ashburnham is a classic links rich in golfing heritage (Bernard Gallagher and Sam Torrance won memorable career 'firsts' here on a course founded in 1894). There's more heritage at Tenby, where links golf was played before the club was officially founded in 1888, making it the 'oldest affiliated course in Wales'. Neighbouring Trefloyne is a mere youngster, less than 20 years old. Newport, another course with a long history, has moved with the times, recently expanding from nine to 18 holes and offering luxury accommodation. It shares some of the best sea views on the planet with nine-hole St David's City.

WHY GO? You can choose

GIVE ME FIVE GOOD REASONS TO GO OFF-COURSE

- 1 After checking out the greens at Carmarthen Golf Club visit the National Botanic Garden of Wales – it's vast and visionary, with a UFO-like Great Glasshouse designed by Sir Norman Foster.
- 2 Delve into Dylan Thomas's life at Swansea (and call into Swansea Market for some traditional treats). Then visit the sleepy seatown of Laugharne and Dylan's beloved Boathouse.
- 3 Take a boat trip from Tenby to Caldey Island (left). Buy perfume. Give to partner.
- 4 Visit tiny St David's then walk its magical peninsula following one of the finest stretches of the 870-mile Wales Coast Path.
- 5 Go Gower in fact, go all the way to the Gower Peninsula's mind-blowing 'land's end' and the 'miles of yellow coldness' of Rhossili beach, as recommended by Dylan Thomas.

Welsh golf couldn't have asked for a better birthplace. Natural golfing terrain, medieval walled town and superb sea views. The course is a pure links classic. The gently rolling James Braid links offer a string of classy holes and fast true greens. It is little wonder Tenby is regularly chosen to host national championships. Visitors are welcome all year round and the excellent drainage ensures the course is hardly ever closed.

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

All we can say is that Royal St David's is a par-69 and that you might be put off by having a UNESCO World Heritage Site looking over your shoulder. Harlech Castle looms over this links course, an undisputed classic along with Aberdovey and Borth & Ynyslas just down the coast. Aberdovey's world-class links get rave reviews by everyone from great golf writer Bernard Darwin to great golfer Ian Woosnam. Talking of Woosie, he cut his golfing teeth at mountainous Llanymynech, where we're big-hearted enough to admit that three of its 18 holes are played in England. Welshpool is another highland gem, an exciting course that's hard on the legs - but well worth it (Darwin said it was 'so unexpected, so unlike anything else, perched on the roof of the world').

There are more stunning vistas at Aberystwyth, Cardigan, Llandrindod Wells, Cradoc (near Brecon)... at most clubs, really, for they sit in green, gorgeous surroundings. We've mentioned links golf but here's a variation on the theme. Llandrindod's hilltop course has a links influence, while Cardigan's is a links/parkland mix. But for the 110 per cent green, green grass of Mid Wales go to Cradoc a sweeping parkland course with gob-smacking, golf-stopping views of the Brecon Beacons.

WHY GO? Because of its 28 golf

GIVE ME FIVE GOOD REASONS TO GO OFF-COURSE

- 1 Walk up to the legendary 'Chair of Idris', Cader Idris, the brooding mountain above Dolgellau. Don't take a nap when you get to the top you might awake 'a poet or a madman – or not at all'.
- 2 Explore Offa's Dyke from Knighton. Sections of this astounding 8th-century earthwork still survive in the hills above.
- 3 Visit our own 'Lake District', the Elan Valley lakes, plus more scenic reservoirs at Clywedog, Nant-y-Moch and Lake Vyrnwy.
- 4 Chill out in Aberaeron, the handsome little Georgian-style seaport that has become a fashionable 'must stay and eat there'
- 5 Take in a festival or country fair we're cheating here, for you'll end up with a lot more than five reasons. Sleepy Mid Wales will tire you out during the Royal Welsh Show and festivals at Brecon (left), Dolgellau, Hay-on-Wye, Llandrindod Wells, Llanwrtyd Wells, Machynlleth, Presteigne and Welshpool.

Senior Open Championship comes to Royal Porthcawl in 2014

In July 2014, Royal Porthcawl plays host to the Senior Open Championship, the first Major Championship to take place in Wales. While the historic links of Porthcawl have seen their fair share of top competitions in their time, this is undoubtedly the biggest. Previous winners include players like Bob Charles, Bernhard Langer, Gary Player and Tom Watson. By the time 2014 rolls around, names such as Colin Montgomerie, Miguel Angel Jiménez and Davis Love III will be eligible for the competition, so we can expect a stellar turnout in Wales from players and fans alike. And it doesn't end here. Should you miss it this time round, the Senior Open will return twice more to Welsh shores between 2014 and 2024.

WHAT'S THE SCORE?

Who knows, when it's windy and you're playing the notorious, charismatic, magnetic Nefyn & District? Bring your sea legs, for this amazing cliff-edged course is 'like playing off the deck of an aircraft carrier', a unique experience that perhaps explains why it has such a large and devoted fan club. Other must-plays in these parts include Bull Bay on Anglesey (Wales's northernmost course and one of eight on the island), Maesdu and North Wales (both at Llandudno), Conwy, Porthmadog (a quirky mix of heathland and pure links) and the lovely Vale of Llangollen.

But best of all, we recommend that you take yourself off and discover some of our many golfing gems for yourself. If you're a fan of James Braid (and who isn't?) you can follow in the footsteps of this legendary course designer on the James Braid Trail (see pages 24/25 for more details). Want to play the second-longest hole in Britain, a whacking, whopping 664 yards? Then go to Chirk Golf Club. Rhuddlan's beautiful parkland course isn't quite as venerable as its 13th-century castle, but it's in fine health for an 80-year-old. For something a little more recent there's Northop Country Park, another stunning parkland venue founded in 1993.

WHY GO? For around 49 golf clubs in all kinds of fabulous locations, for all kinds of players. And did we mention the mountains? There are lots of them – 15 peaks over along the border the grassy hills of the Clwydian Range are protected as an 'Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty'. AONBs also cocoon the pristine shores of the Isle of Anglesey and Llŷn Peninsula, keeping them as nature intended. It's the Great you want more fresh air after your game of golf there's an A to Z of activities to get stuck into (abseiling to zip-wire riding, since you ask).

GIVE ME FIVE GOOD REASONS TO GO OFF-COURSE

- 1 Climb to the top of Snowdon, the highest mountain in England and Wales. If you want to save your energy for the golf, go by narrow-gauge railway.
- 2 See Llandudno from different perspectives from the end of its delightful Victorian pier (all proper resorts should have one) or the cablecar or tramway that carry you to the top of the Great Orme headland.
- 3 Take a picture of the par-58 (we're talking letters here) Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogogoch. We know it sounds corny but it has to be done. And since you're on Anglesey you'll want to make the most of the island's beautiful beaches.
- 4 Go pony trekking and riding from the verdant Vale of Clwyd up, up and away into the airy Clwydian Range (left).
- 5 Travel to the 'land's end' of the Llŷn Peninsula and be blown away by the views across to Bardsey Island. And possibly the wind too, so hold on to your hat.

Planning a golf break on the North Wales coast can be tricky. Do you choose parkland, links, or a bit of both? Golferfriendly hotel or self-catering? Mountain, castle or sea view?

With 9 challenging holes at Penmaenmawr, USGA standard greens at Abergele, championship courses at North Wales and Maesdu, Llandudno and Wales' only Open Qualifying course at Conwy; you've quite a choice to make. We find decisions like these are best left for the 19th hole.

Senior Open Championship comes to Royal Porthcawl in 2014

In July 2014, Royal Porthcawl plays host to the Senior Open Championship, the first Major Championship to take place in Wales. While the historic links of Porthcawl have seen their fair share of top competitions in their time, this is undoubtedly the biggest. Previous winners include players like Bob Charles, Bernhard Langer, Gary Player and Tom Watson. By the time 2014 rolls around, names such as Colin Montgomerie, Miguel Angel Jiménez and Davis Love III will be eligible for the competition, so we can expect a stellar turnout in Wales from players and fans alike. And it doesn't end here. Should you miss it this time round, the Senior Open will return twice more to Welsh shores between 2014 and 2024.

making the grade

A guide to quality assurance. All the accommodation featured in this publication has been independently assessed so you can make your choice in confidence, knowing that each place to stay has been given a rating according to the quality and facilities on offer

These ratings mean that you can be sure of standards and choose the accommodation that's just right for you.

Visit Wales/AA are the only checking agents in Wales, checking out over 5,000 places.

STARS are your guide to quality. The Star Quality Grading Schemes apply to all types of accommodation: serviced – hotels, guest houses, bed and breakfast.

farm accommodation, hostel/hostel type accommodation, self-catering cottages and apartments and caravan holiday home and touring/camping parks.

All accommodation grades are based on a set of common quality standards agreed by Visit Wales, Visit England, Visit Scotland and the AA. The star ratings reflect the facilities and overall quality of the experience.

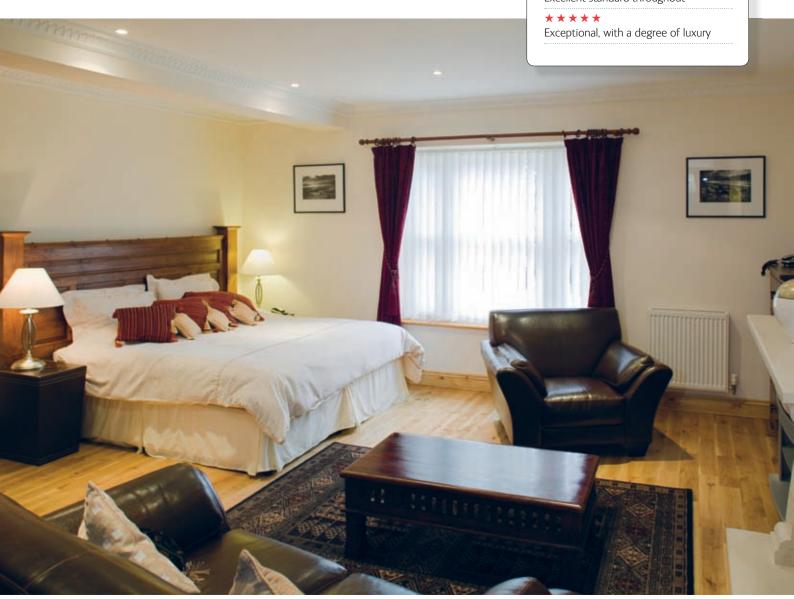

Here are the quality ratings:

Simple, practical, no frills

Well presented and well run

Good level of quality and comfort

Excellent standard throughout

What do our star ratings mean?

Accommodation operators are graded between one and five stars (with 5 stars being the highest) based on the overall quality of the experience and the facilities available.

Accommodation differs in style and therefore different rating schemes apply to different types and styles of business. To help you make your choice, each star rated business will also be given a designator to describe the style of accommodation you can expect.

Does a lower star rating equal less quality?

Many lower star rated accommodations may still offer high quality but do meet all of the facility and service expectations for the higher star ratings. Is it particularly important not to compare Guest Accommodation ratings against Hotel ratings as different criteria are used when assessing.

The advice is to always check with an establishment before booking to check that the accommodation offers the services and facilities that meet your needs – they will only be too pleased to help.

Also look out for that extraspecial property that has been awarded Visit Wales' Gold Award, given for exceptional standards of hospitality, comfort and food in serviced accommodation.

Occasionally, it has not been possible to visit the accommodation prior to publication. In these instances, the property is marked as 'Awaiting Grading'.

Some accommodation operators have chosen not to be star rated, but they have been checked out to ensure that they provide an acceptable level of services and facilities appropriate to their type of business. They are identified as either 'Verified' or 'Listed'.

A Warm Welsh Welcome

Watch out for this sign as these places have achieved a Croeso

Award in recognition of their exceptional Warm Welsh Welcome.

Accommodating visitors with disabilities

All Visit Wales graded properties have an Access Statement. This statement tells visitors in a clear, accurate and honest way how the property can meet their particular needs.

Three symbols have been introduced to help visitors with physical impairments find the Access Statements of most relevance to them.

Accommodation providers have selected the one symbol which best describes the improvements that they have made to their properties.

Look out for these symbols:

Access improved for mobility impaired people

Access improved for visually impaired people

Access improved for hearing impaired people

Key to accommodation symbols

Please note:

All gradings and awards were correct at the time of going to press. Occasionally, it may not have been possible to undertake a grading.

This situation is clearly identified by 'Awaiting Grading' appearing within the advertisement/entry.

Grading assessments are on-going and improvements made by establishments may have resulted in a revision since publication. Please check when booking.

Further information on gradings and awards is available from Visit Wales, Welsh Assembly Government, Rhodfa Padarn, Llanbadarn Fawr, Aberystwyth, Ceredigion SY23 3UR

frequently asked questions

Golf

When is the best time of year to play golf in Wales?

The milder climate found on the coast, combined with soil that drains exceptionally well, means that most of Wales's links courses stay open all year round. Generally, however, the main golfing season here starts at the beginning of April and runs to mid-October.

What clothing should I bring?

Summers in Wales are generally mild and fresh, with average temperatures of around 20°C (68°F). But the weather is unpredictable, so an extra sweater and waterproofs are worth keeping to hand particularly if you're playing on the coast or on higher ground. Dress codes on Welsh courses are fairly relaxed, although jeans, tee-shirts and trainers are not usually permitted. A few courses don't allow metal spikes. If in doubt, check with the course when you book.

Do I need a handicap certificate?

Not all of our clubs will ask for a handicap certificate or proof of club membership, but if you have them, bring them with you. Again, it's best to check with the club you book regarding their particular policy.

Do I need to book tee times?

Most courses in Wales will find space for casual golfers on most days. However, to avoid disappointment, we'd recommend checking tee time availability as far in advance as possible.

Can I hire equipment and arrange caddies?

You can hire clubs and trolleys at many of our clubs. Buggies are becoming more common at our bigger clubs, but walking is still the rule here. If you need a buggy for medical reasons, make sure you book it well ahead of your visit. You can now find a caddy to accompany you on your round using Wales's official caddy service caddylocator.com

General

What travel documents do I need?

On arrival in the United Kingdom, visitors must show a valid national passport or other document satisfactorily establishing his/her identity and nationality. Entry clearance and visa requirements for Wales are the same as for the United Kingdom as a whole. Details are available from VisitBritain visitbritain.com or the UK Visas website ukba.homeoffice.gov.uk

Do I need medical insurance?

You are strongly advised to take out adequate insurance cover before travelling. Your travel agent will be able to suggest a suitable policy. For more information on healthcare for travelers see visitbritain.com

I have special needs - where can I ask for holiday advice?

Tourism for All is a free specialist information service promoting accessible tourism. It offers free specialist information on travel planning, transport, accommodation and booking.

tourismforall.org.uk

What currency do I need?

We use pounds sterling currency (£) in Wales. Foreign currency can easily be exchanged at banks, post offices, bureau de change kiosks and larger hotels. All credit cards that bear the Visa. Mastercard and American Express logo are widely accepted. However, please note that the Euro (€) is not yet widely accepted in the UK.

Are there guidelines for tipping?

There are no definite rules for tipping. If you feel that you've received good service then you may wish to leave a tip. This is most common in restaurants, where the tip can be up to 10-15% of the bill – but you should always check to see if a service charge has already been included. Tipping in hotels is also at your discretion. It is not normal to tip bar staff, although they may be offered a drink. Taxi drivers are often given a tip, particularly on longer journeys and if they have carried your luggage.

Can I claim a VAT refund?

A Value Added Tax (VAT) of 20% is applied to goods and services. US visitors to Wales can reclaim VAT on goods only by using the foreign exchange tax-free shopping arrangements at participating shops and stores. A tax-free shopping form is obtained and completed at the shop, where you must show your passport. The form must then be presented to Her Majesty's Revenue & Customs when you leave the UK.

What time do shops and banks open?

Generally, shop opening hours are 9:00 to 17:30 Monday-Saturday and usually 10:00 to 16:00 on Sunday (in larger towns and cities). Banks tend to open 9:00 to 17:00 Monday-Saturday.

How much do things cost in Wales?

B&B accommodation: £30 - £35 per person, per night Average 3 star hotel: £40 - £50 per person, per night Lunch (snack/sandwich): £3 3 course dinner (no wine): £20 - £25 Bottle of wine in a pub: £12 - £15 Pint of beer in a pub: £3 Cup of tea or coffee: £2 Small bottle of water: £1 Average car parking (1 day): £12 City centre Town £4 National Parks £3

Can i use my electrical appliances?

Standard voltage in Wales, like the rest of the UK, is 240 AC, 50-60HZ. An adaptor or converter may be necessary to use your appliances in the UK.

How do I call Wales?

If you are telephoning Wales from abroad, please note that the international dialling code for the UK is +44. Having dialled the country code, the area code has to be dialled omitting the '0'. For example, if you want to phone the Cardiff Tourist Information Centre (Tel: 029 2087 3573) from abroad, ring +44 29 2087 3573. In Wales, to obtain the assistance of the fire, police or ambulance service in an emergency, dial 999 from any phone.

Where do I get local information?

One of the simplest and quickest ways of getting local information is by calling in to one of our Tourist Information Centres. The staff are highly trained, have an excellent knowledge of the area and will be delighted to help you with booking your accommodation, finding places to eat, things to do, routes to take, national and local events and obtaining maps, guides and books. Normally, offices are open between 10:00 and 17:00. For a list of Tourist Information Centres see visitwales.co.uk/ contact-visit-wales

If playing golf has given you an appetite for the outdoors, then Wales comes well equipped for adventure. We have mountains for the mountain bikers, salmon rivers for the anglers and bogs for the bog snorkellers. And as we're surrounded on three sides by sea, we're pretty well off for water, too – including surf for the surfers. None of this depends on good weather, which is just as well because it has been known to rain occasionally in Wales. But that's hardly a big issue when you're hurtling down a mountain with your rear brakes burned out. And don't let the end of summer dampen your enthusiasm. The sea in Wales is warmer in October than in July. Even when it does get chilly, you could always pack away your surfboard and go fishing for grayling on the River Wye instead. Our Visit Wales Active websites will point you in the right direction. So what are you waiting for?

Senior Open comes to Royal Porthcawl in 2014

In July 2014, Royal Porthcawl plays host to the Senior Open Championship, the first Major Championship to take place in Wales. While the historic links of Porthcawl have seen their fair share of top competitions in their time, this is undoubtedly the biggest. Previous winners include players like Bob Charles, Bernhard Langer, Gary Player and Tom Watson. By the time 2014 rolls around, names such as Colin Montgomerie, Miguel Angel Jiménez and Davis Love III will be eligible for the competition, so we can expect a stellar turnout in Wales from players and fans alike. And it doesn't end here. Should you miss it this time round, the Senior Open will return twice more to Welsh shores between 2014 and 2024.
